California's trees, in their variety and great beauty, are a source of pride to the people of this State and one of the many aspects of natural beauty which have brought fame to California.

Californians know that it is not enough to rely on nature to protect and increase our stands of beautiful trees in the face of progress and growth. They know that for every giant Redwood, handsome Oak or stately pine removed to make room for a highway or an expanding city, another tree must be planted and nurtured.

To further this effort, and as a tribute to our great horticulturist, Luther Burbank, the Legislature has declared that March 7 annually be proclaimed ARBOR DAY.

Therefore, I, Edmund G. Brown, Governor of California, do hereby proclaim March 7, 1962, as ARBOR DAY in this State.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this 30th day of January, A.D., One Thousand Nine Hundred and Sixty-two.
