PROCLAMATION

It is appropriate each year to set aside time in which to reflect on the contributions labor has made to the growth of California.

We have all watched our cities grow, our industries prosper, great bridges and majestic dams span and harness the water of our State. In each of these we see the hand of labor. No plan, no investment can bear fruit except as it is tended by the worker.

To match our growth, made possible by labor, we need constantly to expand the horizon. Over the next fifteen years California must prepare for more than a quarter of a million new jobs each year. We will be ready, with the help of all, to accept the challenge and be ready.

In recognition of the magnificent contributions made by labor in California, I, Edmund G. Brown, Governor of California, proclaim Monday, September 5, 1960, as LABOR DAY in California.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State of California to be affixed this 30th day of August, A. D., One Thousand Nine Hundred and Sixty.
