

Clothes that Define Us: Fashion and Dress through the Ages

Throughout history the clothes that we wear speak volumes about our identity. Whether it is geographic residence, occupation, gender, class, religion, or ethnicity, the things we dress in can define our place in the world. This exhibit explores clothing throughout history and the ways in which sartorial choices continue to express the circumstances of our existence.

January 15th – March 2nd, 2018
Sutro Library Reading Room
J. Paul Leonard Library, 5th floor